2. FOUNDER & INSTITUTIONAL HISTORY

About the Founder – Late Shri P.T. Lee Chengalvaraya Naicker (1829 – 1874)

P.T. Lee Chengalvaraya Naicker was born in 1829. His father, Perumal Naicker, held the British government title 'Sirdar Bahadur' and was a Subedar-Major in the Madras Army. His mother, Theivayanaiammal, was known for her piety and devotion. Even in childhood, Chengalvaraya Naicker was noted for his sweet nature, devotion to God, and kindness.

Business Career

At the age of thirty, after his father's death, he established his own business and quickly became a leader of the Indian trading community in Madras. He served as the Dubash of Messrs. Shand and Co., amassing considerable wealth through capability and diligence.

Philanthropy – The Great Famine of 1857

During the great famine of 1857, his house became a regular relief camp distributing necessities of life to the needy, irrespective of caste or creed. His favourite resort was the great temple in Triplicane, where under his patronage a Sabha was founded to edit and publish sacred Vaishnava books.

The Historic Will (1870)

After years of planning, he executed a will dated 1870 (modified by a codicil in 1878) bequeathing his entire estate to religious and charitable purposes. Key provisions included:

- Estate administered by a board of Trustees
- Modest allowances for poor students of his community
- Specific religious offerings in temples
- His choultry at Ooveri to be permanently maintained
- Sadavarthi for Bhairagi pilgrims at Kanchipuram
- Balance for Orphanage and technical education

The Name 'P.T.Lee'

One of the most notable aspects of his will was his wish to prefix 'P.T.Lee' to his name — P for his father Perumal Naicker, T for his mother Theivayanaiammal, and Lee — a title bestowed by the British as a mark of distinction for his remarkable service. This revolutionary act demonstrated his protest against the prevalent male chauvinism of excluding a mother's name from one's initials. He passed away in 1874 at the age of 45, leaving a legacy that continues to inspire generations.
